Garbage-chute fires leave tenant on edge

Suspected arson. Fire crews have been called repeatedly to a Croydon Avenue building in the past week over alarms

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Security has been stepped up at Lakeview Apartments on Croydon Avenue and one tenant is worried about her own safety and that of her neighbours after a series of fires appear to have been set in the communal garbage chute.

A notice has been posted inside the building apologizing for the repeated incidents and warns residents there will be "extra security officers that will be patrolling the inside of the building."

Amber Musty, one of the tenants, said the fire alarm at 360 Croydon Avenue has gone off five times in the past three days and suspects someone is lighting fires in the garbage chute. In some cases, she said smoke billowed from the garbage chute room and into hallway outside her apartment.

"The one on Wednesday morning was the worst," said Musty. "That's the one where I saw tons of smoke."

When she walked out of her apartment to see what was going on, she couldn't see down the hallway because the smoke was so thick, she said.

Apartment staff are locking the chutes between 10 p.m. and 8 a.m., the notice said.

Ottawa Fire Services said they responded to the building once on Tuesday, twice on Wednesday, and once on Thursday after being alerted by the alarm company.

Musty said the 1 a.m. wake up call on Wednesday was the scariest. "It was really bad," she said.

Musty is worried the tenants might not bother to leave the building in the event of a real emergency if the fire alarm keeps going off. "It's stressful because you don't know if this person is going to decide one day they'll actually do damage to the building."

The landlord could not be reached for comment.

City rejects Whitehaven development

In a rare move, the city's planning committee rejected a planned-unit development in Whitehaven on Thursday because the proposal was too dense.

The unusually deep 1,423-square-metre property on Woodroffe Avenue between Georgina Drive and Highway 417 created a planning quandary for city staff and the developer, a numbered company.

In the end, the developer refused to budge from its plan to replace one home with two semi-detached buildings containing four units and a three-townhome building.

"This is a very good step against random spot zoning across the city," said Gary Sealey, chairman of the zoning committee for the Federation of Citizens' Associations, a group representing community associations from across the city. "There is a choice of people over mindless development here."

Unchecked intensification "offends community values," Sealey told members of the city's planning committee.

"It's not lost on us that people don't like spot rezonings," planning committee chairman Peter Hume responded. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Online. Is it offensive?

There are a number of sports teams that have been criticized for having names and logos that refer to and caricaturize aboriginal peoples, such as the Atlanta Braves, Chicago Blackhawks and the Washington Redskins. Debate over their use and Ian Campeau's criticism of the Nepean Redskin logo exploded on the Chez 106 Facebook page.

On his show One Minute Moore, host Randall Moore called out a boycott, organized by Ian Campeau, of businesses that support the Nepean Redskins. You can listen at blog.rogersbroadcasting.com/randall-moore/ and at metronews.ca.

Social media

On Facebook, Moore posted: Are the Nepean Redskins a 'racist organization? ' That's what some guy is tweeting. He's also telling people to boycott the local businesses who support the Redskins' football association. This angers the Hell out of me. Thoughts? ~ Randall 1MM

Campeau responded: Alright everyone. Here's a local radio station asking us if we find the local team, the Nepean "Redskins" racist. It's time to actually let them know how you feel about this institution and it's racist name. It's the third comment down on the wall. Please go and comment. facebook.com/Chez106

The debate unfolded:

Brandon Mulligan: Bah, old news. Isn't one of the head leaders of the Redskins a native himself?

Chad Preseault: Should the Raiders be condemned for potentially incited riots and pillaging and piracy?

John Nelson: Well, Redskin is derogatory with no positive connotation to it whatsoever. (Unlike Brave or Warrior. The Browns are actually named after Paul Brown, original owner of the team).

Matthew Essex: Look here in the US I'm a fan of the Washington Redskins and it seems like every year there is some lawsuit or something. It always gets thrown out. It was not meant as a insult so I do not get why this whole thing keeps coming up.

Greg Towers: There is not a single name anymore that won't upset someone. What should we do? Get City Hall to ban team names?? Some knob might even complain about the use of "Nepean", does that exclude players from other neighbourhoods(discriminatory?), does the city mind this team using their name??? See my point...(it's under my bad haircut).

Phil Hanbidge: The word "redskin" has a racist history. Many First Nations groups consider "redskin" as an offensive racial slur and inappropriate for a team name, whether any offense is intended. There is an alternative: most Nepean teams are named the "Raiders" which is also the name of a successful NFL franchise. It alliterates the same as "Redskins". Or I believe the Nepean "N-Words" is still available if they wanna stick with the inappropriate racial pejorative theme. They could play against the Kanata KKK's and the Orleans Oily-Arabs.

Team should change 'racist' name: Musician

Nepean Redskins. Effort to boycott sponsors of kid's team earns radio rebuke, sparks social-media flamewar

GRAHAM LANKTREE
graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

A member of local band A Tribe Called Red says its high time the Nepean Redskins football team changes its name.

"The name would be the same as calling a black man the N-word. It's extremely derogatory," said Ian Campeau, a.k.a. Dee Jay Ndn. "As First Nations we haven't had a civil rights movement yet. That's why society lets the redskins name slide."

Campeau, an Ojibway of the Nipissing First Nation, said he started making calls for the name change last year after a friend told him about the local youth team. "I joined their Facebook group, jumped on and started challenging them about it," he said.

Trying to negotiate with the team via email, Campeau said, he was met with silence. So on July 25 he geared up his campaign by calling for a boycott of local businesses, such as Gabriel Pizza and Baizana Insurance, that support the team.

The move got Scotiabank to pull its funding last week, Campeau said. Yet Nepean Scotiabank branch manager Mary Voteary said she couldn't comment to confirm whether funding was pulled.

Now Campeau is feeling the backlash. On Wednesday August 22, Chez 106 radio host Randall Moore called Campeau's charge that the team has a racist name "a ludicrous assertion" on his morning talk show One Moore Minute.

"A racist organization? Give me a break," Moore said. "These businesses are singled out, vilified, for what? For giving kids a chance to be part of a team?"

Moore's comments led to an eruption of comments on the Chez 106 website and Facebook page. Yet Moore's rant misses the point, Campeau said.

"I don't want them to not play football. I'm pretty flexible in the name change," he said. "If it takes five years, fine. They just need to start phasing it out now. I understand it takes time and money."

Campeau said that Moore should have him on his show to talk out the issue. "If I get to talk to people about it," he said. "I think they'd understand."

"I have no comment. I've got to go," said Nepean Redskins vice-president Barry Helps when asked to weigh in.

"I just want to sit down and talk to the organization, but they don't want to respond," Campeau said. "They seem totally happy with having a racist moniker.

"My point is: Would you call someone you don't know a redskin?"

Ottawa will get CFL, maybe pro soccer, never pro hoops: Report

Sports forecast. The Conference Board of Canada predicts three new NHL teams by 2035

JESSICA SMITH
jessica.smith@metronews.ca

By 2035 Ottawa will have the population and economic foundation to support new professional teams playing soccer, football and minor-league baseball — but not basketball, according to a new report from the Conference Board of Canada.

The think-tank analyzed the demographics and economics of major urban centres and found the country could, by 2035, support three new NHL teams, the return of Major League Baseball to Montreal and the NBA to Vancouver, as well as at least three new Major League Soccer teams.

Ottawa, given its population and income level, is doing fairly well when it comes to sports teams, said Glen Hodgson, senior vice-president and chief economist of the Conference Board of Canada. "It would have been nice to have a CFL team the last decade, and that's coming back now that Lansdowne's proceeding."

A CFL team is expected to begin playing in Ottawa in 2014.

By 2035, Ottawa and Gatineau will have a population of 1.7 million — enough to also support a Major League Soccer team. The city also has a high number of immigrants, who traditionally support soccer, said Hodgson.

While Ottawa could support a double-A baseball team, an MLB team is not feasible, he said. Montreal is the only city the report identified as able to support an MLB team.

Basketball has always proven more of a challenge in Canada, said Hodgson. "Even the (Toronto) Raptors have trouble filling seats," he said.

However, the think-tank found that Vancouver could support the return of an NBA team.

New Fall Service

Effective Sunday, September 2

- Fall service increases
- Trim Park & Ride expanded
- Changes to Stittsville service on Routes 96 and 261
- Student discounts and U-Pass
- Sunday service on Labour Day

On Sunday, September 2, new schedules go into effect on most routes to reflect the increased demand for service in the fall, along with numerous service improvements and increases.

You should obtain a new timetable for all peak period and express routes as well as the following routes: 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 12, 14, 18 through 111, 114, 118, 121, 122, 124, 126, 129, 130, 134, 137, 144, 146, 148, 150, 152, 156, 164, 171, 172, 174, 176, 177 and the O-Train.

The following routes will have routing changes: 9, 12, 30, 34, 76, 96, 99, 118, 152, 156, 130, 134 and 261. *Details available at octranspo.com and on the buses next week.

Route 129 will no longer operate to the Canada Aviation and Space Museum on weekends with the end of the special summer-weekends-only service. The trip to and from the museum on weekdays will continue.

Route 185 will no longer operate on weekends to the Agriculture Museum and Experimental Farm with the end of the special summer-weekends-only service.

Route 245 will be replaced by route 99.

Service Increases

To meet the growing demand for service, trips that are over and above the normal seasonal increases will be added to routes 8, 12, 22, 87, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 111, 144, 148, 156 and 177.

As well, capacity will be increased by using articulated buses on some busy trips on routes 8, 9, 14, 20, 22, 27, 30, 34, 60, 62, 65, 73, 87, 93, 94, 96, 97, 98, 99, 111, 114 and 118.

This fall and into the spring, 75 new double decker buses will be introduced on many express routes to accommodate even more passengers on each bus.

Park & Ride Expansion

The growing east end communities and rural areas will benefit from the expansion of Trim Park & Ride. Construction is underway to expand Trim by 360 new spaces, add a second entrance to the lot and improve accessible parking. Safety will also be improved with additional cameras and emergency call boxes.

Trim is a great alternative to Place d'Orléans Park & Ride as it's just minutes away on Trim Road at the 174. Trim Park & Ride is served by rapid transit route 95, express routes 22 and 221, and local route 122. Construction will be completed later this fall.

School Routes

School routes and trips change every year, so confirm your route and schedule before school starts. Your best bet for up-to-date information is to visit www.octranspo.com.

U-Pass Returns September 1

The Universal transit pass is returning for full-time students at Carleton University and the University of Ottawa. Students can enjoy the convenience and freedom of getting around without worrying about exact fare, buying bus tickets or purchasing their next monthly pass. The 2012-13 U-Pass, available at your university, is valid for eight months from September 1 until April 30, 2013. There is no age restriction.

Save with a Student Pass

Take advantage of discounted monthly student passes for economical travel — available for full-time students ages 13-19.

Don't forget to buy your 2012-13 OC Transpo Student photo ID card ($6.25) before September 30.

We'll be visiting many high schools and post-secondary schools to take photos. Call or visit our web site for dates and locations, as well as for details about what documents you'll need to qualify for the student card.

Labour Day

On Monday, September 3, a Sunday schedule will operate, so only those routes that normally run on Sunday will be in service. Holiday schedules are available at octranspo.com, and OC Transpo Sales Centres and Information Centre will be open to serve you.

The DayPass ($7.75) will be valid as a Family DayPass September 1, 2 and 3. A family of up to six people, with a maximum of two age 13 or older, can get unlimited rides for the day. You can buy a DayPass on the bus (exact fare).

Service Information

For the arrival times of your bus 24 hours a day and up to six days in advance, call 613-560-1000 or text 560560 plus your four-digit bus stop number.

Cops plan to greet Sandy Hill students

Door-to-door. Eglin Street, ByWard Market and Sandy Hill will be a focus of police efforts to ease tensions between students and their neighbours

jessica.smith@metronews.ca

Students in Sandy Hill can expect to see police officers at their doors and in some of their favourite bars when university classes resume next month.

Ottawa police are working with the "Town and Gown Committee" to reach out to students in early September and inform them about safe behaviour, "being a good neighbour and the dangers of alcohol consumption," police announced Thursday.

Cops, along with bylaw inspectors, representatives from Action Sandy Hill, the University of Ottawa and Coun. Mathieu Fleury's Office will be going to door-to-door in the Sandy Hill, said Acting Supt. Uday Jaswal.

"What's nice about the in-person contact is it gives us a chance to engage with students and other residents and if there are concerns or issues that come up, we're on scene and able to address those," said Jaswal.

Ottawa police officers will also increase their enforcement of liquor laws at bars as students return to class, said Jaswal.

"We'll be across the city, but certainly bars on Eglin Street, the ByWard Market and in Sandy Hill will be a focus," he said.

The increased presence in bars is one part of a new program developed by the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police and the Alcohol and Gaming Commission of Ontario. It's called the Community Alcohol Safety and Enforcement program.

Spark Street dancers start party at noon

Wearing party hats, savouring free Popsicles and blowing soap bubbles, 198 dancers hit the Spark Street dance party in front of the CBC building at noon. Ed Kwan, a.k.a. China Doll of Shanghai restaurant, became the centre of the Spark Street dance party's energy, egging on the crowd. Meena Rajulu and Natalie Fraser threw the party with a $1,000 grant from Awesome Ottawa, a group that chooses a new project to fund every month.

Ottawa biz to launch student-only dating website

Marc Chouinard, left, and his business partner, Christopher Gimmer, promote their website, ClassmateCatch.com, at the University of Ottawa. JOE LOFARO/METRO

A new school session is just around the corner and so is the awkward tension between single post-secondary students.

The men behind ClassmateCatch.com — Carleton University graduate Christopher Gimmer and Marc Chouinard — are hoping to make it easier for things to click between students this year by launching a new dating website that cater exclusively to post-secondary students.

Students from the University of Ottawa, Carleton University, Algonquin College, and Queen's University will be the first to be admitted to the free website. Members require a university or college email address to register.

The idea for this website came from the difficulty Gimmer had in finding a girlfriend when he was a student at Carleton, he said.

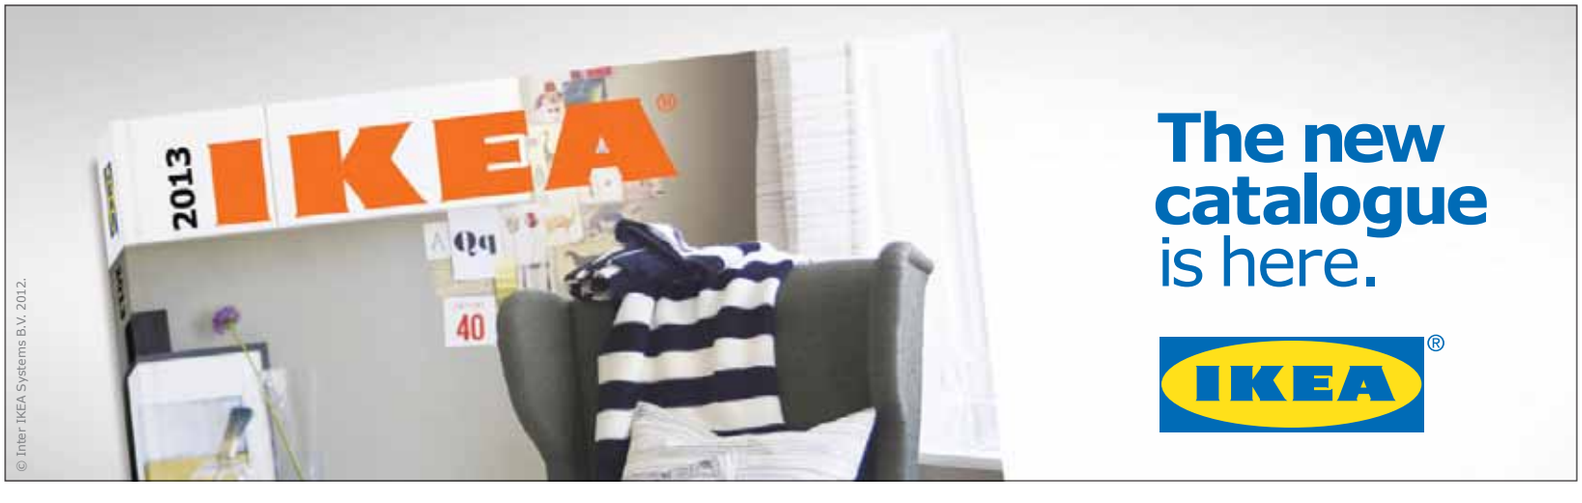
"I was in the commerce program and it was fairly more dominated by males," said Gimmer, 26. "And, also, when you do the same classes in your program, you're always with the same students.

"It was very hard to meet other students from other faculties and other departments."

What makes ClassmateCatch.com different from other dating sites is that profiles are viewable only to members and that non-students are cut off from the site. The primary focus is dating, but people can also make new friends.

"You can search for students who go to Carleton and you can online chat with people right then and there, and potentially meet up with someone right on campus that day," said Gimmer. "You would never get that on a general dating website."

Registration for the site opens Sept. 1. JOE LOFARO/METRO



The new fraud: 'E-mules' play catch me if you can, and make crime pay

Crime. Forget Leonardo DiCaprio's cheque-forging character. Today's fraudsters are cunning entrepreneurs who are enlisting everyday citizens to launder money

ELISABETH BRAW
Metro World News

"In money laundering there's a rule," Ken Rijock says: "You're only limited by your imagination."

Rijock, a Miami lawyer, knows what he's talking about: He laundered $200 million in Colombian drug money and served a prison sentence for it, too.

Now Rijock wants to warn others about the money laundering going on right under their noses. "The money launderers work very hard," he says, "and now they don't even have to get on a plane to go to a tax haven. Now we have the Internet, which is making their job easy."

Daunting enterprise

"It's next to impossible to catch money launderers."
Ken Rijock

And the Internet has given rise to a new kind of mule: The e-mule. "E-mules are an emerging trend," says Mauro Falesiedi, senior specialist on economic crimes at Europol, the European police agency. "We've had money mules crossing the border with cash for a long time, but now we also have e-mules, who are recruited to help transfer fraudulently obtained money."

Unlike the old-fashioned mule, e-mules don't have to carry anything: They just lend criminals their name. "As an e-mule, you're a law-abiding citizen who lets criminals borrow your bank account to transfer money," Falesiedi says. "Obviously you get paid — often 10 per cent of the amount. The e-mules are often students or persons with no judicial background."

Are they e-mules, too? Leonardo DiCaprio, shown with stewardesses in the film Catch Me If You Can, played a con artist who cashed $2.5 million in fraudulent cheques in the 1960s. The film was based on a true story, but modern-day fraud offers far more opportunities for crooks. DREAMWORKS

Organized crime groups from Russia and Ukraine are among those setting up money-laundering schemes with the assistance of e-mules. According to the Financial Action Task Force, an intergovernmental organization, criminals are also using e-mules in casinos and in currency-exchange bureaus. But old-fashioned cash smuggling continues, too, as does money laundering through real-estate and shell companies.

In theory, banks can easily spot an e-mule. "If you're a student and usually have $400 in your bank account, and all of a sudden you get $10,000 from a Nigerian account, that should normally raise a red flag and generate a financial disclosure to the competent domestic authorities," Falesiedi says.

But the reality is different. "It's next to impossible to catch money launderers," says Rijock, who now helps police catch them. "The only way is if the police catch one criminal and he leads them to others." Many banks do the bare minimum, he says. "They don't train their staff to catch money launderers. The banks don't want to be the policemen of the world."

Terrorism and money: Are you financing terrorists unknowingly?

Like criminals, terrorists also launder money. As early as 1998, U.S. officials acknowledged that al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden's finances were shrouded behind so many front companies that it could take years to decipher them.

A recent report by the intergovernmental Financial Action Task Force says terrorist groups traffic everything from drugs, cigarettes and diamonds to human beings. Some employ legitimate organizations as fronts. The groups carry out humanitarian work but also channel donations to terrorists.

As a result, donors wishing to help the victims of a natural disaster, for example, may unwittingly be funnelling money to terrorist groups.

Terrorists, too, have discovered Internet payment systems. They process huge amounts of money and, because the transfers are happening on the Internet, no country has the authority to make arrests.

Q&A

Fine art and virtual gaming

E-mules are a new money-laundering trend. What other new techniques do money launderers use?

They like to divert non-monetary items into monetary items and back again. One method they're using a lot right now is to buy artworks then sell them back to themselves again and again. They also use things like virtual gaming, where you can turn virtual money into real money. There's no question that people unknowingly help them. In the world of money laundering there's always duplicity involving unwitting participants.

Why is it so hard to catch money launderers?

Money laundering is a secondary crime. It's always connected to prostitution, the drug trade or arms trade. When people are caught for those primary crimes they're often simply put behind bars. And money laundering is one of the most entrepreneurial crimes. Money leads to money. Money launderers can become legitimate businessmen using their illegal proceeds as seed money.

Meth ring foiled by authorities

More than two dozen people have been indicted in California for their roles in a cross-border drug ring that sent methamphetamine to the United States from Mexico.

Federal authorities say 16 of 27 people were arrested Thursday as part of a 16-month investigation.

Craters get Curious as rover roams Mars

Mission possible.
Vehicle now poised to study whether Mars environment could support life

Curiosity rover's wheel tracks on the surface of Mars are seen in an image sent from one of the rover's cameras. NASA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Now that Curiosity passed its driving test on Mars, the six-wheel NASA rover can set its sights on longer treks.

The first test drive around the pebbly Martian crater where it landed was just that — a test drive. The rover edged forward about 15 feet, rotated to a right angle and reversed a short distance, leaving tracks in the rust-tinged soil.

Mission managers were elated that Wednesday's maiden trek of the $2.5-billion mission was glitch-free.

"It couldn't be more important," said project manager Peter Theisinger. "We built a rover. So unless the rover roves, we really haven't accomplished anything.... It's a big moment."

The short spin came a day after Curiosity successfully wiggled its wheels to test its steering capabilities.

Curiosity landed in Gale Crater near the Martian equator Aug. 5 to explore whether the environment once supported microbial life. The touchdown site has been named Bradbury Landing in honour of the late The Martian Chronicles author Ray Bradbury, who would have turned 92 on Wednesday.

The rover's ultimate destination is Mount Sharp, a towering mountain that looms from the ancient crater floor. Signs of past water have been spotted at the base, providing a starting point to hunt for the chemical building blocks of life.

You too can watch rover on the run

Viewers can now relive the drama of the Curiosity rover's landing on Mars with a new video detailing the final moments of touchdown.

Curiosity is the first spacecraft to record a landing on another planet.

The U.S. space agency Thursday posted the video on its website, embedded with audio from mission control. It starts with the heat shield falling away. The ground grows larger in view as Curiosity is lowered by cables into an ancient Martian crater.

"Touchdown confirmed" is heard, followed by cheers.

The rover arrived on Aug. 5 to begin a two-year mission to examine whether Mars's environment was hospitable for microbial life.

Amateur artist in Spain ruins fresco of Christ

Borja, Spain. Priest asked the elderly parishioner to touch up the painting

The 20th-century Ecce Homo-style fresco of Christ before, left, and after an amateur artist tried to restore it. A priest had asked her to touch it up.
CENTRO DE ESTUDIOS BORJANOS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The distraught 81-year-old woman who turned a damaged fresco on a church wall in Spain into an international joke says she'd been asked to fix the painting by the local priest.

"Everybody who came into the church could see we were painting," an aghast Cecilia Gimenez told the Spanish TV station RTVE.

"We've always repaired everything here," she said.

"Of course, it was the priest" who asked her to touch up the portrait of Jesus Christ that hung in the Santuario de Misericordia in the small town of Borja near Zaragoza in northeastern Spain.

The painting, widely misrepresented as a "valuable 19-century fresco," is actually the 20th-century work of a local man, Elias Garcia Martinez, with mostly sentimental value. Locals say professional restorers have been called in to look at the damage.

Lennon's killer denied release by N.Y. parole board

Mark David Chapman. Parole board said the crime was 'heinous, unprovoked, violent, cold and calculated'

John Lennon's killer was denied release from prison in his seventh appearance before a parole board, New York corrections officials said Thursday.

Mark David Chapman, 57, was denied parole by a three-member board after a hearing Wednesday, the state Department of Corrections said. Chapman can try again for parole in two years.

He shot Lennon in December 1980 outside the Manhattan apartment building where the former Beatle lived.

Chapman was sentenced in 1981 to 20 years to life in prison after pleading guilty to second-degree murder.

The musician, singer and songwriter was 40.

"Despite your positive efforts while incarcerated, your release at this time would greatly undermine respect for the law and tend to trivialize the tragic loss of life which you caused as a result of this heinous, unprovoked, violent, cold and calculated crime," board member Sally Thompson wrote.

The panel praised Chapman's conduct and accomplishments but said "parole shall not be granted for good conduct and program completions alone." The board noted there was significant opposition to his release.

In 2010, Chapman recalled that he had considered shooting Johnny Carson or Elizabeth Taylor instead, and said he chose Lennon because he was more accessible. His motivation was instant notoriety.

The book, No Easy Day, is scheduled to be released Sept. 11, with the author listed under the pseudonym of Mark Owen. The publisher asked that his identity be withheld. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

German raids target suspected neo-Nazis

Report. The number of far-right extremists has grown to 9,800 from 9,500, according to the intelligence agency

More than 900 police officers raided homes and clubhouses of suspected neo-Nazis in a crackdown in a western German state on Thursday, seizing far-right propaganda material, computer hard drives and a wide variety of weapons, the region's top security official said.

The raids to collect evidence came after North Rhine-Westphalia state interior minister Ralf Jaeger banned three local neo-Nazi groups.

"These groups are anti-foreigner; they are racist and they are anti-Semitic," Jaeger said.

The crackdown in North Rhine-Westphalia comes amid a greater focus on the far right in Germany. That was sparked by the revelation last year that a small group of neo-Nazis apparently managed to kill nine minorities and a police officer over a seven-year period while remaining off the radar.

The existence of the National Socialist Underground group only came to light last November, when two of its three core members were found dead in an apparent murder-suicide after a failed bank robbery.

The third alleged core member, Beate Zschaepe, is in custody pending trial.

Politician hijacks miners' memorial

South Africa.
Ministers accused of complicity in shootings last week that killed 34 striking miners and wounded 78

A fiery politician cast out of the ruling party Thursday hijacked the main memorial service for 34 striking miners killed by police, to accuse President Jacob Zuma's government of complicity in the shootings. Angry government ministers walked out.

Zuma did not attend any of the services. He called a news conference to announce a retired supreme court judge will head a judicial commission of inquiry to investigate "the facts and circumstances which gave rise to the use of force and whether this was reasonable and justifiable in the particular circumstances."

He announced a wide range of issues for the commission to investigate, including the role of London-registered Lonmin PLC, which owns the platinum mine where the violence was sparked by union rivalry.

The commission would look at Lonmin's conduct and report "whether the company, by act or omission, created an environment which was conducive to the creation of tension, labour unrest, disunity among its employees or other harmful conduct," Zuma said.

The sombre and grieving tone of the memorial service at the mine was shattered by Julius Malema, who was expelled in April for sowing disunity in the African National Congress. Malema was applauded when he said the government has not intervened in the mines "because our leaders are involved in these mines." He said that President Zuma's foundation and other ANC leaders have shares in the mines.

"Our government has become a pig that is eating its children," charged Malema.

Malema's outburst came after church leaders had urged people not to use the memorial service to score political points.

About a dozen cabinet ministers left before they could address the crowd of more than 1,000 at the mine at Marikana, 70 kilometres northwest of Johannesburg.

Zuma had decreed a week of national mourning to honour all victims of violence in South Africa, which has one of the world's highest murder and rape rates.

Inequality

Shootings spotlight growing anger

Last week's shootings were the worst display of state violence since apartheid ended in 1994 and have thrown the spotlight on growing anger at South Africa's massive inequality, poverty and unemployment.

The violence unfolded as some 3,000 rock-drill operators demanded a minimum wage of 12,500 rand ($1,560 US). The poorest 10 per cent of the population shares 1.1 billion rand while the country's richest 10 per cent has 381 billion, the Congress of South African Trade Unions said Thursday.

In a statement it claimed Lonmin's financial officer is paid 152 times as much as a rock-drill operator at the mine. It claimed the operators earn only 5,600 rand though researchers who work with miners say they make at least 10,000 rand. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New project launched to find ill-fated ships

Nunavut. Inuit oral tradition has been key for previous searches seeking the lost Franklin expedition

Details

- The federal government is contributing $275,000 to the new expedition, with additional costs being picked up by private partners.
- It's expected to last between four and six weeks.

The search for the lost ships of the ill-fated Franklin expedition continues.

A new research project was announced Thursday by the prime minister in Nunavut, where the ships are believed to have sunk.

"Why do we search for the Franklin? The wreckage of the Franklin expedition is a national historic site designated some time ago — it is the only undiscovered national historic site, we feel an obligation to discover it," Stephen Harper said.

Sir John Franklin set out from England in 1845 to find the Northwest Passage with two ships, the HMS Erebus and HMS Terror

But they ended up trapped in ice, and Franklin, along with other crew members, died in 1847. The next year, the surviving crew set out on foot but were never seen alive again.

All this is known thanks to a message left in a cairn on King William Island, and while the message suggested where the two ships might have been when they were abandoned, previous attempts to find the wrecks have been unsuccessful.

In 2010, a search team did find the remains of the HMS Investigator, sent in 1850 to find Franklin.

The unknown final resting place of the ships was declared a national historic site in 1992, though the ships will remain the property of the United Kingdom.

The search areas will include both the O'Reilly Island area, west of the Adelaide Peninsula and further north to Victoria Strait and Alexandra Strait.

Order of Canada. Black capable of defending his membership in writing, federal lawyers say

Conrad Black has a way with words, government lawyers say, and the Order of Canada advisory council is well aware of that — he gave them a copy of his latest book.

Federal lawyers are set to argue in court Friday that Black should have no trouble making written arguments to the council deciding the status of his Order of Canada membership, documents show.

Black, 67, is asking Federal Court to force the advisory council to allow him an oral hearing as it decides whether to recommend the Governor General revoke Black's prestigious membership, bestowed upon him in 1990.

His lawyers are arguing that his case is too complex to be handled in writing — the only medium Order of Canada rules allow. The former media magnate went to Federal Court after his request to make arguments in person was denied.

But documents filed in advance of Friday's hearing show federal lawyers are relying on Black's own prowess with prose to argue that he doesn't need oral arguments to make his voice heard.

The council can recommend members of the order be stripped of their status, but the final decision rests with the Governor General.

Alberta town escalates battle against rats

Officials in Medicine Hat, Alta., think it could take two years to clear the city of rats.

The municipality has announced it's stepping up its war on the rodents with a new strategy called "Operation Haystack."

Ed Jollymore, the city's waste manager, says baited hay bales will be scattered around Medicine Hat to attract and kill the vermin with a poison that won't harm people or pets.

Prior to the infestation, Alberta had been largely rat-free for 50 years.

Resurgence seen in syphilis cases

Cases of syphilis across Canada have risen dramatically over the last two decades, spiking to more than 1,750 cases in 2010 from 177 in 1993, the most recent statistics show.

"People age 30 and older accounted for 73 per cent of all the reported cases in 2010," said Dr. Howard Njoo of the Public Health Agency of Canada. "The other interesting thing is the vast majority of cases are among men."

Arctic

Officials fretted over war game

The administrative wing of Prime Minister Stephen Harper's office worried about the optics of hundreds of Canadian troops taking part in a major NATO-sponsored Arctic war game in northern Norway earlier this year.

Conservatives have made rebuilding the military, more international involvement and a more muscular presence in the North key policy touchstones.

But senior federal officials told the army last fall they weren't sure the country should participate in Exercise Cold Response.

It took the intervention of the assistant deputy minister of policy at National Defence to smooth the way for the army's participation, reassuring senior government officials that were "no policy obstacles" that contradicted Government of Canada policy.

Colorado shooting. Suspect was banned from university, prosecutors tell court

Prosecutors say the suspect in the Colorado theatre shooting made threats and was banned from the University of Colorado after failing a key exam six weeks before the rampage.

They made the accusations about James Holmes in court Thursday as they tried to convince a judge to let them see records from the university, where Holmes had been a graduate student.

They also claim professors had urged Holmes to get into another line of work before the shooting. Attorney Karen Pearson didn't disclose where their information came from, and prosecutors did not give further details on the nature of the threats.

Defence lawyer Daniel King objected to the release of the records, calling the prosecution's request a "fishing expedition."

Holmes, a former neuroscience doctoral candidate at the university, is accused of killing 12 people and wounding 58 others in the July 20 shooting. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Education records sought

- Prosecutors are seeking non-medical education records turned over last week to an Arapahoe County district judge.
- They have said they need the documents to gain access to a notebook reportedly containing violent descriptions of an attack.

First lady Michelle Obama met Thursday with families of those killed and wounded earlier this month when a white supremacist opened fire at a Sikh temple in Wisconsin. Temple official Kulwant Singh Dhaliwal said Obama offered her sympathies for the Aug. 5 tragedy. He said her appearance is a "wonderful gesture." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Judgment day: Breivik's mental state will be focus of court ruling

Norway massacre. On Friday, the confessed mass killer will learn his fate — but if he's declared insane, he'll appeal 'on the spot'

Anders Behring Breivik's defence lawyers say the confessed mass killer won't appeal if he's sentenced to prison but he will challenge any ruling that declares him insane.

Breivik's mental state will be the focus when the Oslo district court presents its judgment against Breivik on Friday for the bomb and gun attacks that killed 77 people and injured more than 200 in July last year. After deliberating for two months, a five-judge panel will decide whether to send the right-wing extremist to prison or a mental hospital.

After speaking to Breivik on Thursday, defence lawyer Geir Lippestad said his client would only appeal if committed to psychiatric care. "He is very clear that if he is deemed insane, he will appeal, and appeal on the spot," Lippestad said. An appeals trial would likely be held early next year.

Breivik, who claims he is a "militant nationalist," said during the trial that being sent to an insane asylum would be the worst thing that could happen to him and accused Norwegian authorities of trying to cast him as sick to deflate his political views. His lawyers say Breivik is already at work writing sequels to the 1,500-page manifesto he released on the Internet before the attacks.

Regardless of the sentence, Breivik will be taken back to Oslo's Ila Prison, where he has been held in isolation for most of the time since his arrest.

The prison has built a psychiatric ward just for Breivik in case he's declared insane. But even if he is, he wouldn't be placed in that unit if he immediately appeals the insanity ruling, said prison spokeswoman Ellen Bjercke. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Facebook launches new iOS app

Version 2.0. No integration of Instagram yet, but latest update for smartphones and tablets focuses on being speedier

A screenshot from Facebook shows its new mobile app, which launched Thursday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On Thursday, Facebook addressed users who had gripes with its app for iPhones and iPads with the launch of a faster version. Rather than add a slew of new features, the company said it rebuilt the application from scratch to make it speedier and less clunky.

In a recent demonstration at the company's headquarters, the new iPhone app opened about twice as fast as the older version. Photos and comments also load faster. Users can now "like" comments on photos, which wasn't possible with the previous mobile app.

Mick Johnson, mobile product manager at Facebook, said programmers removed some lesser-used features, such as a way to view the app horizontally, to help speed it up.

The mobile arena presents Facebook with its biggest challenge — and its biggest opportunity. That's where its user base is growing the most.

The iPad version of the new app now features Timeline, the latest version of the profile page that Facebook is rolling out to all of its users.

The app is available for free from Apple's App Store.

Housing. Parents helping kids buy homes: Economist

A downturn in the housing market may not be as bad as feared because the important 25-34 age group will continue to buy houses — some with help from their well-off parents, says a senior economist at CIBC World Markets.

While young people may have to postpone buying a house for a few years due to their student-debt level, their parents can help them out, Benjamin Tal, deputy chief economist at CIBC World Markets, said Thursday.

The latest report of Canadian debt trends by TransUnion found the average consumer's non-mortgage debt load rose to $26,221 in the second quarter.

That's up 0.74 per cent from the first quarter of 2012 and up 2.41 per cent from a year earlier.

The credit-reporting firm said that's the highest average debt per person it has seen since it began tracking the variable in 2004.

ONE QUESTION: ARE WE MAKING STRIP BILLIARDS AN OLYMPIC SPORT?

THE LIST
Paul Sullivan
Metro

It's time for the Metro List, our weekly guide to what's making waves around the water cooler.

1 Dirty Harry. Harry keeps the flame burning with a new sport that, for some reason, wasn't included in the London Games: strip billiards. There's the good Prince William and then there's the bad Prince Harry. Hands up, who do you prefer?

2 Dirty bedside read. In other naughty U.K. news, a hotel in the Lake District replaced the Good Book with the Very Bad Book — 50 Shades of Grey — in its bedside tables. The hotel manager was denounced from local pulpits, but refused to back down. "The Gideon Bible is full of references to sex and violence, although it's written using more formal language, so James' book is easier to read," he said. That's E.L. James, not King James.

3 Chavril? AvChad? Chad Kroeger of Nickelback is engaged to Avril Lavigne of Sk8er Boi. Stands with the other great romances of the recent era: Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley; Nicholas Cage and Lisa Marie Presley. We can only assume Chad has yet to meet Lisa Marie Presley.

4 Pussy Riot. OK, this is a family newspaper. Of course these brazen young women should get two years hard time for singing a song in church while wearing funny outfits. Their very name is an assault on the ears of innocents like Vladimir Putin.

5 Speaking of assault. Some advice to Missouri Senate candidate Todd Akin: Dr. Oz is the only guy on Earth who gets to talk about the female reproductive system on TV, and that's only because he's been blessed by Oprah. And never, ever use the words "legitimate" and "rape" in the same time zone, never mind next to each other in the same sentence.

6 National park. Let's change the subject. We have a new national park, our 44th. Up north somewhere, it's called Nááts'ihch'oh National Park Reserve, causing the editors at Canadian Press Caps and Spelling to apply for stress leave. Environmentalists are complaining that it's too small, only 4,840 square kilometres, which is about three times the size of Yoho but two-thirds the size of Banff. Just go to Yellowknife, then turn left, go another 680 kilometres and you're there. Lots of grizzly bears, but no golf course. Yet.

7 Speaking of up north somewhere. The Google Street View tricycle is tooling around Cambridge Bay, population 1,477, way up there in Nunavut, a mere 1,770 kilometres from the North Pole as the Snowy Owl flies. Google is now officially everywhere.

8 The cult of Jack Layton. It's been a year since the untimely death of the former NDP leader, but his legend grows, as vigils across the land mourn his loss and celebrate the memory of the man who failed to get elected prime minister four times in a row. Eat your heart out, Stephen Harper.

"Art is the key to your emotions."

Janne Parvianen, artist and teacher

Despite the futuristic visuals, this old-fashioned message is how Parvianen describes his philosophy.

Q&A with Parvianen

- What is most difficult about this technique? It is quite challenging to draw into three dimensional space, so it takes a lot of planning and training. It is usually through trial and error that I find the right positions and the figures for the final photo.
- What emotions do the images inspire? I'm trying to put as much soul in my photos as possible. My main interest has always been human emotions and trying to express them through art. I really like to use strong visual elements in my photos such as skeletons and people laying on the ground to create images that make you wonder what is really happening in them. A skeleton can be happy or sad, it doesn't always have to be seen as a grim image.

Joseph Gordon-Levitt is the most extreme bike courier in Manhattan in Premium Rush. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Rush is the only thing premium in this film

Fun ride. Joseph Gordon-Levitt-led thriller is full of style and action, but lacks any kind of substance

Richard: Mark, Premium Rush is like a BMX race with a plot-line. Bikes dart in and out of traffic, defy the laws of gravity and spin on one wheel, which is all cool, except that it over-shadows the characters. Only Michael Shannon as the out-of-control cop is memorable enough to rise above the bike stunts and skinned elbows.

Mark: In the interests of full disclosure Richard, I cannot ride a bike. In fact, they scare me. So I was unusually riveted by the action sequences in this film. Which definitely eclipsed the characters! I don't know how I felt about Michael Shannon. He had a presence for sure, but he was also kind of cartoonish which stopped me from taking the movie seriously as a thriller.

RC: I don't think it is meant to be taken seriously as a thriller. Any cop who would say, "I forgot to bring my bullets. I'll meet you there," to his cop buddies isn't trying to be Detective Sergeant Joe Friday. He's a wild, bug-eyed caricature of a man on the edge and the second most entertaining thing in the flick (next to the bikes). What did you think of Gordon-Levitt?

MB: Not an actors' movie but he can clearly carry off a leading man role. What I really liked about the movie was its style. The maps, time code, miniatures of Manhattan, and the fractured time narrative all kept me engaged with the limited storyline. Gordon-Levitt's character is called Wiley, as in Wile. E. Coyote, and the movie does have a Roadrunner simplicity. I thought all the gimmicks and stylistic quirks opened it up nicely.

RC: In the beginning I feared that the GPS maps that pop up from time to time might be too much style over substance, and in a way I was right. There isn't much substance here, but it is a fun ride.

MB: What I really didn't buy was the pointless love triangle among the bike couriers, which was a waste of celluloid. But when you say "fun ride" Richard I think you've nailed the picture.

Synopsis

Of all the bicycle courier misfits who patrol the streets of Manhattan, Wylie (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) is the most extreme. Stripped of gears and brakes, his bike is a missile charging through the streets of New York, delivering "that thing to that place, fast." A routine pick-up and drop-off turns dangerous when a crooked cop (Michael Shannon) decides he needs what Wylie is carrying more than its intended recipient.

Cinematic battle. Keanu Reeves documents the digital vs. film debate

Keanu Reeves managed to get the notoriously media-shy Wachowskis (creators of the Matrix) to speak in his documentary Side by Side. GETTY IMAGES

The past two decades have seen rapid advancements in digital filmmaking, leading some to worry that good old fashioned film is on its last legs. It's a subject of particular interest to actor Keanu Reeves, who turns documentarian with director Chris Kenneally to see where technology might be taking Hollywood in Side by Side. In it, he sits down with a dizzying list of filmmakers — including James Cameron, David Fincher, Martin Scorsese and Christopher Nolan — to see how the different medias measure up.

Side by Side goes to great lengths to not only educate its audience on the particulars of film technology over the decades but also to let both sides of the film vs. digital debate have their say. Wally Pfister — Nolan's go-to cinematographer, who is also working on his first film as a director — is firmly on the film side with Nolan, even going so far in Side by Side as to describe himself as "anti-technology." Reeves acknowledges this stance might be a bit extreme, since all filmmaking utilizes some sort of technology. "Filmmaking was such an industrial revolution era tool, right? I guess he's demonizing the technology as other because it's new and coming in and it's not quite the technology that he's using anymore, right?" Reeves admits. "Yeah, I guess it is arbitrary in that sense. It's like an emotional, arbitrary comment."

In the documentary, Reeves gets a lot of folks more comfortable behind the camera to sit down in front of it, and his most impressive "get" of the film might be the Wachowskis, who directed Reeves in the Matrix movies and have become even more media-shy since Lana Wachowski underwent gender reassignment surgery. "The idea that they knew me and the idea of the subject matter helped in terms of wanting to speak on camera," Reeves says.

"One of the responses was, 'For you. Only for you.'"

NED EHRBAR, MWN

Jessica Biel gets all twisted up in new film

The Tall Man. Actress took a beating filming movie that's full of plot surprises

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Jessica Biel stars in the Tall Man. GETTY IMAGES

Jessica Biel likes a good surprise, which is why she can't really talk too much about her latest film, the Tall Man. The shock-filled movie, which screened this summer at the Fantasia International Film Festival in Montreal, is about a small mining town where the mysterious figure of the title has been abducting children for years — or at least that's what it starts out being about. And to hear Biel tell it, she really put herself through the ringer on this one. Just ask her chiropractor.

With a movie this twist-filled, how do you market it or promote it?

I don't know how you market it. You can't market it as a horror film because it's not. You can market it as a thriller, but then it kind of changes into a drama. It's still a thriller. It's definitely tense and creepy. It's so hard to talk about it. I just try not to say anything specific (laughs).

Is that twisty nature part of what drew you to the project?

Yeah. Because as I was reading the script, I didn't know what was happening at all. I literally couldn't guess. It just kept surprising me, page after page after page. ... It's a lot of twists.

It didn't look like the most comfortable shoot.

No, that's for sure. It was intense. It was probably one of the hardest things I've ever done. It was just full-on, every day being pushed by (director) Pascal (Laugier) to a point of no return where I literally was like, "I can't do anymore," and he was like, "Do more. Go. More, more, more" until I exploded with... I don't know. It was intense, but it was the only way to do it.

This is by no means a glamorous role.

No, not at all. I somehow seem to enjoy doing these kinds of things every 10 years. It's really masochistic, I think. Like whipping, beating, I don't know what that is. I think it's just the thrill of the fear. And it's the violence in cinema, which is safe, because it's not actually happening — but you're testing the waters of it and you're putting yourself in that position, getting the s— kicked out of you and putting your emotional system in that place but knowing that it's fine. There's something that I find really intriguing about that.

That sounds exhausting. At least it's once every 10 years and not every role.

Oh my God, I think I'd have a heart attack. After I did this movie, I went to see my chiropractor. I was like, "I'm having a hard time breathing." And he dug his fingers into my diaphragm — because my diaphragm was jammed up into my ribs because I'd spent two months (hyperventilating) and limping around. And my back was weird, my posture was off, my teeth started to ache because my hips were off because I was limping for two months. It was crazy. I would literally have a heart attack if I did that every year.

Sixties soundtrack goes down well with prohibition trader tale

Lawless. Musician and screenwriter Nick Cave uses the 'boxy' sounds of The Velvet Underground to set the tone in latest film

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

While his main vocation is still music, Nick Cave admits he's more than happy to write a screenplay whenever director John Hillcoat asks him to. The latest request from Hillcoat? Adapting Matt Bondurant's book the Wettest County in the World, about Bondurant's grandfather and great-uncles running a thriving moonshining operation during Prohibition. Cave also got to take a crack at the music for the film — as he's often done for Hillcoat, most recently for 2009's the Road. For Lawless, he found some unusual inspiration in the Velvet Underground.

How did you feel about changing the title from the Wettest County in the World to Lawless?

Matt's title — this is what I'm told — didn't translate into other countries. Look, I didn't have anything to do with that. It was a decision that was made closer to when it came out. There's been various reasons why. Foreign territories couldn't translate it effectively, so the film would then have a bunch of different names, and that was not good for the film. I've heard that it sounded like a porn film, the Wettest County. But at the end of the day, I think probably the Wettest County in the World was just too lyrical to drag in the youth market. I would say it was simply a marketing thing.

Where did the idea come from to include period versions of more modern songs, like with the Velvet Underground?

I'm not really sure. Initially we were looking at songs of the time, obviously. But I just personally felt that had been done a lot and had been done really well, like O Brother Where Are Thou. I didn't want to be chasing that kind of thing. So the time started to shift a little bit — maybe we take some from a little later. And then, f— it, let's take something from way over there and see what that's like, and then kind of replay it in a sort of attempt to capture that kind of spirit of that time. But you know, something like White Light, White Heat already sounds very much fitted to the time anyway on some level — there's a sort of boxiness to the way it's recorded. I think that was the first one, and once we had that we went, "OK, that's what we're doing."

Hit & Run

Director. David Palmer, Dax Shepard

Stars. Dax Shepard, Kristen Bell, Bradley Cooper

Dax Shepard stars as an ex-getaway driver who leaves behind the safety of witness protection to accompany his girlfriend (Kristen Bell) on a job interview to Los Angeles. Unfortunately as he hits the road so does his former partner in crime (Bradley Cooper). Shepard and Bell are a couple in real-life and the chemistry between them shows. When it's just the two of them on screen Hit and Run has the makings of a fun romantic action adventure. Unfortunately the movie is also populated by peripheral characters with the combined charm of a slap (stick) to the face.

Patang (The Kite)

Director. Prashant Bhargavaby

Stars. Seema Biswas, Nawazuddin Siddiqui and Mukkund Shukla

Patang sets a family in crisis in the midst of the Uttarayan kite festival in Ahmedabad. As colourful kites sway and roll in the air above the partly ruined city, the people below are locked in inescapable suffering. It's a dramatic contrast. A wealthy man comes to visit his poor relations with promises of a new life and a free condo in his city, unleashing their resentment, negativity and mistrust. Terrific performances include those of non-actors.

Hosts of the HGTV series Live Here, Buy This. HANDOUT

Ever wonder what life could be like elsewhere?

TV. Travel-hungry Canucks explore international house swaps in Live Here, Buy This

Anyone who's ever dreamt of pulling up stakes and moving halfway across the globe should be able to relate to the wannabe expats in the new HGTV series Live Here, Buy This.

These travel-hungry Canucks have grand ideas of making their favourite vacation getaway their family's permanent home-sweet-home and why wouldn't they? Most of the fantasy digs just happen to be in sunny, tropical paradises or culture-rich, centuries-old hamlets.

Of course, actually pursuing such a dream is another matter entirely. And so this show takes a closer look at what a Canadian homeowner could get if they sold their home and bought a comparably priced abode elsewhere.

"The show is really about presenting options to the homeowners," says Dave Lapsley, one of three Canadian-based hosts who criss-cross the globe to profile far-flung properties.

"Some (foreign) homes, simple homes, were similar to what the homeowners have here ... and then there were other ones (that) were like small castles in Italy or huts right on the beach. There was a treehouse home in Costa Rica. The array of homes was vast."

Each episode of Live Here, Buy This profiles a Canadian family musing on what life could be like elsewhere. They pick three dream locations and are presented with two homes in each locale considered equal in value to their current place.

Needless to say, where you could end up and the features you get vary widely depending on where you start and where you want to be.

There seemed to be a lot of bang for your buck in rural Italy. Trading a modest $140,000 cottage in Barrie, Ont., can apparently get one family a slightly larger stone country home surrounded by olive groves.

But searching for a pad in Croatia proves surprisingly difficult for a Toronto family of four with a $575,000 budget. Their wish list gets them an 84 square metre (900 sq. ft.), two-bedroom apartment in the heart of the charming coastal town of Rovinj.

No one actually moves at the end of each episode — this is merely a glimpse at the possibilities for adventurous globe-trotters, says series producer Danielle Kiraly.

"When you go on vacation and you have the greatest time of your life, you go, 'Oh my God, wouldn't it be great if we could live here?' This is just taking that fantasy one step further."

BBC America 'really confident' in new drama series Copper

Television. Featuring Canadian actor Kyle Schmid, the period piece takes viewers to famed Five Points neighbourhood of New York

IAN GORMELY
For Metro

Something they don't tell Canadian actors who move down South is that despite living in Los Angeles, you'll be spending a lot of time North of the border.

Originally from Mississauga, Ont., Kyle Schmid has lived in the Golden State for the last eight years, but his work has landed him significant stints in Vancouver, Montreal — where he worked on the North American version of Being Human — and now Toronto, home base of production for Copper, which premiers this Sunday on Showcase.

"It's the show I'm most proud of," he says. "I can share it with my family and friends and have them come on set and share the same energy I feel."

Created by Oz and St. Elsewhere writer Tom Fontana and executive produced by Diner director Barry Levinson, the series is the first foray into scripted drama for BBC America, where it airs in the States. There is no precedent at the network, Schmid says.

"But BBC is really confident with the show. You do get that feeling on set."

Set in the famed Five Points region of New York in the aftermath of the civil war, the program follows Irish police officer Kevin Corcoran whose wife and child have disappeared.

Actor Kyle Schmid

"I love period pieces because of the history and the wardrobe and the characters and the change in the moral and ethic values," he says. "It's rare (in TV) that you get to do something gritty and grimy."

Schmid originally auditioned to play Corcoran, but the part eventually went to Tom Weston-Jones. He was brought back to read for the part of Corcoran's friend, Robert Morehouse, the son of a wealthy industrialist.

After several readings he found himself rehearsing with other actors.

"I'm in the room and I think I'm testing for this part. The BBC producers are in there," Schmid recalls. He asked if there was anything they needed him to do.

"They said, 'No, no, no. You got the part. Nobody told you?'"

Schmid describes Morehouse as a character in flux.

"It was an era of opportunity," he says, "And Morehouse has money, power, women booze and drugs to exploit. With that comes a very layered character."

It's a dream role for Schmid, who loves playing complex parts, but has yet to hit a point in his career where he has the luxury of picking and choosing parts.

"The layers in the personality, the cracks in their walls — human qualities that make people and situations interesting are always the best characters to play."

Kyle Schmid as Robert Morehouse in Copper, premiering this Sunday at 9 p.m. ET on Showcase. HANDOUT

New faces on Top Model

America's Next Top Model gets a facelift with Friday's season 19 (yes, 19!) debut. The first big change is seen in the new personalities: former boxer and male supermodel Rob Evans, fashion blogger Bryanboy, famed stylist Johnny Wujek, and dancer and choreographer Jonte.

They replace former longtime series stars Nigel Barker, J. Alexander and Toronto-raised Jay Manuel. This season also features the show's first-ever College Edition. (CW).

Investigative journalism at its finest

Going from the inane to the intellectual, we find new episodes of investigative journalism series 20/20 (ABC, CHCH) and Dateline NBC (NBC, CTV Two) airing Friday.

There's also an encore airing of the CBC Marketplace episode Superbug in the Supermarket, in which journalists test 100 samples of chicken from across Canada for harmful germs.

Learn about the World's greatest Rock 'n' Roll band

The Rolling Stones may have turned down the opportunity to perform at the recent Olympics closing ceremony, as the Guardian newspaper recently reported, but you can catch them Saturday on a biography about the group. The Rolling Stones: Truth and Lies also features interviews with critics and fans. (AUX TV).

Films of all genres on deck

The popcorn maker will be in overdrive Saturday with several choice film offerings.

Among them is Super Size Me, in which maverick filmmaker Morgan Spurlock eats only McDonald's food for 30 days (CBC NN).

For action, click to the Steven Spielberg/Tom Cruise double bill of War of the Worlds and Minority Report (Action).

In the comedy vein, there's Princess Bride (BITE TV). And for drama, head to The Girl Who Played With Fire (Bravo) or the Canadian Joshua Jackson road trip One Week (CBC).

Poking fun at The Donald

The Roast of Donald Trump is an encore airing on Sunday, but one worth watching again. Celebrities roasters include Larry King, Marlee Matlin, rapper Snoop Dogg, and Jersey Shore's Mike (The Situation) Sorrentino (Comedy).

Prince Harry

Prince in hot water at home over photo scandal

In the wake of his nude Las Vegas photo scandal, Prince Harry has been summoned home, heading to Balmoral Castle in Scotland to get a talking-to from Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip as well as his dad, Prince Charles, according to Us Weekly.

A source tells the magazine that the royal bachelor — and third in line for the British crown — will "have to face up to family" for the outrageous behaviour. And his personal security will have to answer some questions as well — like how the photos could have been taken, let alone leaked. But Harry's guards needn't be too worried. "Of course questions will be asked, and matters raised, but no one's job is on the line," the source says. "As protection officers, their job is to intervene when his life is at risk, not to protect his image."

Gold medal challenge

The London games may be over, but Prince Harry isn't letting Team USA get away with the swimming gold that easily. The royal challenged Ryan Lochte during the American swimming champion's 28th birthday party Monday at a Las Vegas pool. Las Vegas Sun columnist Robin Leach reports the prince stripped down to his jeans and gestured for others to clear the way for the contest at the XS nightclub pool at the Wynn resort. As predicted, the 11-time Olympic medallist won.

Tax lessons with Beanie Sigel

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

On September 12, Beanie Sigel is due to report to prison for a two-year stay for tax evasion.

But although the Philly rapper pleaded guilty to failing to pay around $350,000 on unreported income, he's not going quietly. In fact, Sigel has a perfectly good explanation for not filing between 2003-2005: "The years that they charged me for failure to file taxes is years that I was incarcerated," he tells MTV of his stint for weapons and drug charges. "When you're incarcerated in a federal facility, you're not allowed to conduct any business at all."

That's a little like being late for work because your bartender was moving slow.

But sure — we've been there. The thing is, Sigel doesn't really intend to pay up no matter where he's living. "You shouldn't be able to tax income," he says. "If I fix your roof and you wanna pay me in 20 pounds of bananas, do you think Uncle Sam wants 45 per cent of my bananas? But because you're paying me $400,000 in currency he wants a part of that."

Beanie, whenever you make it out of prison, we fear you and your non-logic have a career in politics.

Angelina Jolie

Like mother like daughter

It looks like Angelina Jolie is OK with her kids getting in on the act, as one of her children — 4-year-old daughter Vivienne — will get some screen time with mom. "Angelina Jolie's daughter Vivienne will play a minor role as the child version of Princess Aurora opposite her mother in Maleficent," a statement from Walt Disney Studios confirms. Elle Fanning will play the older version of the princess, better known as Sleeping Beauty.

Can I be frank? When it comes to comfort food, I love a good wiener. It doesn't have to be all fancy pants with crazy toppings and snazzy dogs between my buns. I'm cool with a splash of mustard over something prepackaged.

I'm in the minority. Hot dog aficionados are making the common into an explosion of sophisticated flavours by turning dogs into delicacies.

Funky toppings and theme-oriented creations are turning the lowly supermarket sausage into the star of a gourmet revolution worthy of its own show on The Food Network.

Question is: What do you drink with that? With such a wide variety of interpretations reach for something light, clean and refreshing: beer.

A good brew, especially a lager style, is a food affinity equalizer when things get spicy, sharp or crazy eclectic.

After years of being an exclusively USA offering, Rolling Rock Extra Pale Lager (473 ml, $2.35 - $3.29) has finally arrived in Canada. With good weight, a tight flavour profile and a linger bitterness, it's a perfect companion to a dolled-up dog. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. Around the world in three hot dogs

Creative Hot Dogs. Transform them with internationally inspired flavours

A well-dressed dog — that is a hot dog accompanied by robust and inspired toppings — can transform this classic summer food into so much more.

But just because they are overflowing and messy doesn't mean they shouldn't have a plan. Draw inspiration from other dishes when planning the toppings for a hot dog. Here are some suggestions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Greek Dog

It's inspired by feta cheese and spinach that are in spanakopita.

Thaw 1 cup of frozen shredded spinach; squeeze it over sink to remove water. In skillet over medium-high, heat splash of olive oil. Sauté spinach, diced medium onion and 2 minced cloves of garlic. When onion tender, season with salt, pepper and dill seed. Grill 4 hot dogs and toast 4 hot dog buns over medium heat. Spoon spinach mix into each bun, then place a hot dog over it. Top with feta cheese and tzatziki.

The Pizza Dog

The only way to make meat-wrapped meat better is to add melted mozzarella cheese.

Using 2 slices of prosciutto per hot dog, wrap 4 hot dogs tightly in prosciutto. Grill the hot dogs over low heat, turning regularly, until the prosciutto is crisp and lightly browned, about 8 minutes. Meanwhile, fill 4 hot dog buns with bocconcini (small balls of fresh mozzarella). Toast the buns on the grill (bun opening facing up) until the cheese is warm and starting to melt. Place a hot dog in each bun, then top with oil-packed chopped sun-dried tomatoes and chopped fresh basil.

The Taco Dog

Soft and crunchy and spicy and creamy — exactly the way a taco should be.

Spoon refried beans into 4 hot dog buns. Lightly crumble about 12 tortilla chips, then sprinkle some over the refried beans in each bun. Grill 4 hot dogs over low heat. Toast the prepared buns (bun openings facing up) until the beans are heated. Place a hot dog in each bun, then top with sliced jalapeno peppers, tomato salsa, sliced black olives and shredded cheddar cheese.

Spotlighting a 'different Mexico'

Television. Chef Chuck Hughes hopes to show a lesser-known side of the country and its cuisine with new series

Montreal star chef Chuck Hughes says he hopes to open Canadian eyes to "a different Mexico" with his new television series.

Chuck's Week Off, debuting Aug. 28 on Food Network Canada, saw him venturing on and off the beaten path for two months in Mexico, trying everything from hiking to diving to lassoing with locals.

Of course, he also helped make authentic Mexican meals along the way, including home-made ranchero cheese, beef jerky, chocolate clams, and head tacos (complete with eyes, brain, tongue and cheek).

Hughes says despite recent headlines surrounding violent attacks on Canadians in Mexico, and a travel warning from Ottawa urging Canucks to exercise "extreme caution" in certain areas, he never felt unsafe during his stay last summer.

"There's probably 5,000 people that give a country of 120 million a bad rap," he said. "I travelled for two months everywhere. I literally went everywhere, not once did I feel threatened, not once did I feel scared. People were more scared of me, if anything. They were like, 'Who is that tall white guy with all the tattoos?'"

Hughes was particularly taken with Mexico City, where he stayed in the French-influenced Condesa district.

"I feel like it's a place where almost, I belong. I felt like I was home," said Hughes, 35. "I love the whole country, it was amazing, but Mexico City in particular was just really eye-opening."

The eight-part series is the first spinoff of Hughes' Gemini-Award-nominated Chuck's Day Off, which is broadcast in 30 countries.

The co-owner and chef of Montreal hot-spots Garde Manger and Le Bremner chose Mexico for the spinoff because he knows how to speak a little bit of Spanish and wanted to explore its terrain and cuisine.

"Everybody knows pico de gallo and tacos — well there's so much more," he said by phone. "Being from Quebec, my whole life I grew up on pork, corn, potatoes, and when I look at Mexico it's the same kind of deal, only they have hot peppers and they use the corn in a different fashion. But basically our staples are the same."

Watching Mexican locals cook with old-school methods — using local, in-season ingredients and minimizing waste — in remote areas with few resources taught Hughes a few techniques. It also made him realize how lucky he is to have everything at his disposal at his kitchens in Canada.

"I think that's probably what I take back the most from my whole experience. Not necessarily any specific recipe but more of a philosophy and a way of treating the ingredients, looking at the ingredients and respecting the food," said Hughes.

"My life revolves around it and I've always respected food a lot, but in terms of professional cooking, we're very, very lucky that we have water whenever we want and it's used in every stage." THE CANADIAN PRESS

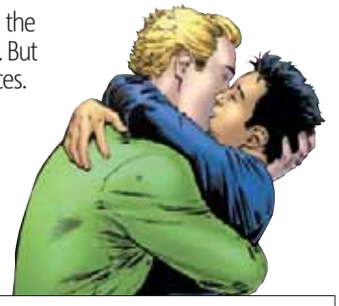
When the second issue of DC Comics' Earth 2 issue came out on June 5, 2012, so did one of the comic legend's oldest superheroes — the Green Lantern. As scandalous as it might have been for the original Lantern to be gay in 1940, the 2012 version caused barely a ripple. But is it really easier coming out as gay or lesbian now than in decades past? Here are four real-life accounts from different times and places.

KATHY ULLYOTT
Metro World News

Out: About



HANDOUT

Andrew Chase

Chef and food writer, Toronto, age 57

Coming-out age: Just before my 18th birthday.

Coming-out story: I was a freshman at university and adjusting to being away from home and admitting to myself that I was gay. I came out first to a friend in my dormitory whom I suspected was also gay (I was right). It was strange, natural, easy, difficult, uncomfortable and liberating.

Any negative repercussions? I had extreme difficulties with my family when I finally came out to them 10 years later, but that mellowed to complete acceptance after about a year.

Differences between coming out now versus then: I think coming out to oneself is probably as hard it was in my time, but society in general is obviously much more accepting today.

What I would tell a young person considering coming out as gay or lesbian today: Do it when you feel comfortable. It can be a gradual process. Realize certain people might never understand, but that is their problem, not yours.

Caleb

Visual effects artist, Vancouver, age 25

Coming-out age: 20

Coming-out story:
I told everyone via Facebook. My parents weren't on Facebook, though, so I had to tell them in person; that was a bit more difficult.

Any negative repercussions?
No, not really; everyone was totally cool. My mom was fine; I don't think she was that surprised.

What I would tell a young person considering coming out as gay or lesbian today: Don't stress out about it too much – tell whom you want to, people you are close to. It can be difficult to tell your parents – but there's a really good chance that they know more than you think they know.

Julia Gulliver

Preparatory chef, dishwasher and student, St. John's, age 19

Coming-out age: 15

Coming-out story: I was in Grade 10, and my best friend knew I had a crush on someone. She tried to guess who it was, guessing every boy we know (nope!). Finally she said, "Is it a girl?" I said, "Yes!" Then I was like a runaway train, telling everybody.

Any negative repercussions? Not really. It took my family a month or two to warm up to the fact. My mom cried. But for her it was less about my being lesbian and more about life being maybe a more difficult road for me.

What I would tell a young person considering coming out as gay or lesbian today: Make a list of things that might happen. If you're not sure how important people (to you) might react, test the waters first by saying, 'Here's this interesting story I read ...' Proceed with caution if you don't like the reaction.

Bradley Borg

Events planner, Toronto, age 52

Coming-out age:
17, when I put words to it.

Coming-out story:
I'd kind of always been out. But when I was in high school I fell madly in love with someone so I found myself putting words around it, saying 'I'm gay.'

Any negative repercussions?
Well, I had a boss once who fell in love with me; when I told her I was gay she fired me. In 1981 when my mom was dying of pancreatic cancer, she was losing her hair from the chemo and asked me to give her a punk haircut. As I was doing it, she said, 'Don't ever tell your father (that you're gay).' It wasn't that he didn't know; he just didn't want to hear it.

What I would tell a young person considering coming out as gay or lesbian today: Just be who you are, be yourself, love who you love, be proud of who you are. I don't think there's any need to make a big pronouncement to the world. Straight people don't walk into a boardroom and say, 'Hey, everybody, I'm straight!' Why should you?

Outlook grim for NHL with lockout looming

Negotiations. League and union no nearer a resolution as Sept. 15 deadline draws near Another NHL lockout is beginning to feel like an inevitability.

Unable to move beyond the philosophical stage of talks, the owners and players have watched another week slip by without progress. They sat down together for a quick session Thursday morning before reporting the same significant gap that has existed all along.

The main issue that divides them is far from complex.

"We believe we're paying out more than we should be," said commissioner Gary Bettman. "It's as simple as that."

Of course, the NHL Players' Association doesn't quite see it that way.

Executive director Donald Fehr has acknowledged there's room for some flexibility in that area — last week's proposal included three years with a slightly lower share in revenues for the players — but he hasn't come to the table in a conciliatory mood after taking over a union that capitulated during the last round of negotiations.

"Everybody understands that employers would always like to pay less," said Fehr. "That's not a surprise to anybody — it's disappointing sometimes — but it's not a surprise."

The parties attempted to make some progress Wednesday by clearing the meeting room of everyone but the key figures: Bettman and deputy commissioner Bill Daly along with Fehr and his brother Steve Fehr, the union's No. 2 man.

They soon discovered there was little common ground.

Those same four men will reopen talks next Tuesday in New York during what promises to be a key negotiation session. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Not much progress

With both sides so entrenched, real negotiations have yet to begin even though the Sept. 15 deadline for a lockout is fast approaching.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Be honest with yourself about your financial situation. The only way to resolve a problem is to identify exactly what that problem is, so stop pretending everything is fine and get to grips with reality. You'll do OK.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Don't look for the usual explanations today. Look for explanations that seem most outrageous, because those are the ones most likely to be true. You need to learn to think in more creative ways.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The Sun's link to Neptune will confront you with situations, both at home and at work, that demand a more flexible response. Approach the same old problems in the same old ways — and you'll get the same old results.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Don't waste time trying to make sense of what is going on in the world because most likely it will make no sense. The good news is you are one of the lucky few who will benefit from the upheavals.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
The more others tell you to follow the herd and do what everyone else is doing, the more you should do the opposite! The herd always ends up in the slaughter-house, so break free and be the one who survives.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You have got to be active if you want to succeed. For best results today get out into the world and meet as many new people as you can. Luck is most likely to come when you are on the move.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
The rules of the game are for other people. Why? Because you are playing a different game entirely. Do as you please and come and go as you see fit. To put it bluntly: Who is going to stop you?

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Do something out of the ordinary today. If others are shocked by your behaviour, that's both a bad sign and a good sign: bad in that it confirms you've become too predictable; good in that you know you must change.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Focus on your work today and believe that you can turn your dreams into realities. Whatever career path you have been following to date you must be more adventurous over the coming few weeks. What have you got to lose?

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Capricorn may be traditional by nature but you know when it is right to disrupt the status quo and that's now. Chaos is not always a bad thing. Out of disruption will come a more positive way of life.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You can afford to take a few risks today. No matter how close you sail to the edge, the planets suggest you won't fall over. Even if, somehow, you do, you'll have a soft landing.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
What you need to realize today is that when you go to one extreme, you encourage those who disagree with you to go to the opposite extreme. Is that what you want? If not, be moderate in what you say and do. SALLY BROMPTON
